Section I: Background/Overview

The No Child Left Behind Act calls for teachers in all classrooms to be highly qualified. Teacher quality demands educators who know their subject matter, are able to integrate technology with instruction, and are capable of modifying instruction to assure that all students, especially students of all races, students who are English language learners, students who live in poverty, and students with disabilities, succeed in classrooms. The Rhode Island Department of Elementary and Secondary Education has worked to assure the quality of its teachers by increasing the accountability of teacher preparation programs in these areas, by establishing guidelines for a non-traditional route to teaching to attract qualified people in other careers to the teaching profession, certification areas where shortages of certified teachers exist, enacting certification and re-certification policies that work to support the federal definition of highly qualified teacher, and supporting district-based mentoring and induction programs to assure the retention of new teachers and the ongoing professional development of other teachers.

From 1998 – 2004, the Office of Teacher Preparation, Certification, and Professional Development has worked to revise standards for teacher preparation program approval, non-traditional routes to certification approval, rules for certification of educators, the process for the development of individualized plans for recertification, and standards for mentoring programs. Much of this work was supported by a federal Teacher Quality Enhancement State grant that was awarded to the Rhode Island Department of Education in 1999. The state's grant ended in 2004.

In 2004 the USDOE released an RFP for partnership grants as part of the Teacher Quality Enhancement Program. A partnership, led by the University of Rhode Island's School of Education, the University of Rhode Island College of Arts and Science, and the Central Falls School District submitted a proposal. In the interest of making this an initiative with broad based leadership, all eight teacher preparation programs (URI, Brown, Johnson and Wales, Providence College, Rhode Island College, Rhode Island School of Design, Roger Williams University, Salve Regina University), three high need school districts that partner with these programs (Central Falls, Newport, and Pawtucket), and the Board of Governors of Higher Education and the Rhode Island Department of Education became partners in the pre-proposal and the final proposal. The USDOE announced that the grant was awarded in October of 2005. Project RITER (Rhode Island Teacher Education Reform) is composed of five objectives. RIDE will take the lead on objectives four and five of the grant, working closely with the partners to assure that the products developed by these teams continue to be closely linked to RIDE initiatives within the Office of Teacher Preparation, Certification and Professional Development. This approach supports the federal government's goal of sustainable, systemic reform.

Section II: Scope of Work

This contract will cover four basic sets of activities related to the support of Project RITER teams and coordination with RIDE initiatives. The work includes: 1. Coordinating the work of Project RITER Team Four – School Districts in the development and implementation of school-based mentoring/induction programs, including summer institutes for mentors; 2. Supporting the work of Project RITER Team Four – Higher Education in the development and implementation of surveys and protocols to elicit feedback from program graduates and to use the data to improve teacher preparation programs; 3. Coordinating the work of Project RITER Team Five in the design and implementation of a non-traditional route to certification in a high needs area; and 4. Supporting the work of Project RITER

Team Three in the recruitment of consultants to advise on programmatic changes in the preparation of teachers to assure that they are prepared to teach diverse learners.

Tasks

1. Link district and RIDE teacher mentoring activities. Work with six schools (two from each partnering district) that will comprise the first cohort of school-focused mentoring programs. Work with this project team to coordinate the development of summer mentoring institutes for the identified schools. The first summer institute will be implemented in the summer of 2005 and an additional institute will occur in each of the remaining four years of the project.

The contractor will be responsible for:

- Convening representatives of the partner districts to establish criteria for selection of schools; identify priorities, needs, and issues that are common across the schools and that are unique to each of the schools; work with the schools to design specific curriculum goals, objectives, and outcomes for the summer institutes to prepare mentors who will be responsible for the induction models at each school.
- Coordinating the work of this team with the work of the Office of Teacher Preparation, Certification, and Professional Development and its Teacher Quality Fellows to assure that the outcomes are complementary to RIDE's initiatives (e.g., Rhode Island Beginning Teacher Standards, Rhode Island Mentoring Program Standards, and Individualized Professional Development Plans for recertification).
- Manage the payments for facilities, services, attendee stipends and other costs of the summer institutes (including the issuance of all 1099 forms for participants) as directed by the Project RITER Objective Four Team Induction Group up to a total of $60,000 per year.
- Work with the Objective Four Team and representatives to redesign and design new mentor training institutes in years two through five of the project with the possibility of modifying the process to focus on schools in need of improvement in the final years of the project.
- Work with Project RITER staff to collect and analyze all data necessary for reporting progress on objective four of the Project RITER grant as part of the annual report to the USDOE.
- 2. Support a development team in the creation of a systematic survey/interview protocol for gathering and analyzing feedback from and performance data on beginning teachers that can be used to inform programs about areas that need improvement.

The contractor will be responsible for:

- Assuring that the colleges and universities that are working to develop appropriate protocols for eliciting data about the quality of their graduates design procedures that are complementary to the work of the Office of Teacher Preparation, Certification, and Professional Development and the requirements of Teacher Preparation Program Approval.
- Working with colleges and university partners to assure that their work on this initiative provides a foundation for the induction work that is described in the prior topic (#1) and that the outcomes are complementary to RIDE's initiatives (e.g., Rhode Island Beginning Teacher Standards, Rhode Island Educator Program Approval Standards, and Individualized Professional Development Plans for recertification).
- Manage the payments for consultants as directed by the Project RITER Objective Four Team College/University Group up to a total of $10,000 per year.
- Work with Project RITER staff to collect and analyze all data necessary for reporting progress on objective four of the Project RITER grant as part of the annual report to the USDOE.

3. Coordinate the Objective Five Team of Project RITER in its work to formulate standards, policies, and coursework that will encourage nontraditional routes to teacher certification for qualified applicants in business, industry, military or other career environments who have appropriate subject matter background. The development process will include the provision of mentor training for nontraditional teaching aspirants. The team will develop the structure of a program, including curriculum, assessments, and recruitment materials and submit its proposal for a program to RIDE by September of 2005. The first cohort of prospective educators will be recruited, admitted, and hired by partner districts and begin the program by June of 2006. The program will be two years in duration and new programs may be added during the five years of the contract at the direction of the Project RITER Team.

The contractor will be responsible for:

- Convening representatives of the two partner districts, four colleges and universities, and the Office of Higher Education to identify the areas of certification, the program design, the program structure, the curriculum, and the process of instruction and field work for the program, including assessment of candidates at entry, prior to field work, and at program completion.
- Coordinating the work of this team with the work of the Office of Teacher Preparation, Certification, and Professional Development and its Teacher Quality Fellows to assure that the outcomes are complementary to RIDE's initiatives (e.g., Rhode Island Beginning Teacher Standards, Rhode Island Standards for Nontraditional Certification Programs, and Individualized Professional Development Plans for recertification).
- Manage the payments for facilities, services, attendee stipends and other costs of the consultants and non-traditional route summer mentors (including the issuance of all 1099 forms for participants) as directed by the Project RITER Objective Five Team up to a total of $40,000 per year.
- Work with the Objective Five Team members to redesign and design curriculum for the program and for the mentor training in years two through five of the project.
- Work with the Objective Five Team members to identify and pursue additional sources of funding to support this work.
- Work with Project RITER staff to collect and analyze all data necessary for reporting progress on objective five of the Project RITER grant as part of the annual report to the USDOE.
- 4. Support a development team in the work of preparing educators who are prepared for the diversity of students in Rhode Island schools through efforts to expand their understanding of specific issues related to effective instruction of students living in poverty, students with special needs, students for whom English is not their first language, and students from racial/ethnic minority groups that are identified in No Child Left Behind as groups that are monitored through student assessment.

The contractor will be responsible for:

- Working with colleges and university and school district partners to assure that their work on this initiative is linked to other Rhode Island Department of Education Teacher Quality Initiatives (e.g., Rhode Island Beginning Teacher Standards, Rhode Island Educator Program Approval Standards, Rhode Island Mentor Program Standards, and emerging work in non-traditional routes to preparation).
- Manage the payments for consultants as directed by the Project RITER Objective Three Team up to a total of $10,000 per year.
- Work with Project RITER staff to collect and analyze all data necessary for reporting progress on objective three of the Project RITER grant as part of the annual report to the USDOE.
